Gypsy Nirvana

Gypsy Nirvana's Illegal Rendition

Imagine being stuck in a detention cell for 21 months, without being charged and without getting bail set. This couldn't happen in the USA, right? But the US can get other countries to detain people, legally or not, just like the infamous CIA renditions that were used to illegally torture foreign nationals.

"American use of 'irregular rendition' is a familiar alternative to extradition. It involves kidnapping or deceit." - Wikipedia

This is the situation that Gypsy Nirvana, the founder of ICMag is in, over in the Philippines. The US wants to charge Gypsy with selling cannabis seeds via the mail and money laundering. They've asked the Philippines government to hold him without bail or charge.

Next, they attempted what is called "irregular rendition". Since Gypsy is not an American citizen, and can only be deported to his own country, US agents kidnapped Gypsy and attempted to get him on board a plane to the US. Gypsy physically resisted getting on the plane, knowing it was without proper authority. So they threw him back into indefinite detention in Manila. Gypsy has now been illegally held, without bail or charges, for 21 long months of incarceration.

As the owner of Seed Boutique and Seedbay, two online cannabis seed sites, Gypsy followed the law in the UK where his business is based. However the US government has made it very difficult for any cannabis business to operate legally in the USA. This continues despite legalization of cannabis proceeding at a good pace in states across the US.

These are the same charges they level against every cannabis business owner, because in the eyes of the Feds there simply is no legal way to bank the proceeds of a cannabis business. It's all money laundering in their eyes. And now that the US has pressured nearly every country on Earth to catch money launderers, they can hold a person in detention overseas indefinitely, it seems.

So Gypsy sits and waits in a third world detention cell, his personal finances in ruin, while his family living in the Philippines (including 5 children under 7 years old) are left to their own devices to survive.

Gypsy is hoping to get bailed out soon, but nothing is certain in the Philippines where corruption rules and the US can pressure the government to keep Gypsy locked up indefinitely. He seems to have no rights, as his visa ran out and the Philippines refuses to issue a new one or grant him bail. This is limbo, a very bad place to be, especially in a third world country.

"Currently it's the Office of the Solicitor General that is holding up my bail petition, for 6 months now because they have to pass their 'comments' on it . The OSG is the legal body that represents the Philippine Government. My case in the Supreme Court is against the Bureau of Immigration, which is a part of this government, for illegal arrest and detention, attempted Extra-Judicial-Rendition and failure to adhere to my constitutional rights, and rights to due process.
If the US wants me so badly then they should have instigated extradition proceedings, and not illegally coerced the Bureau of Immigration thru the US attorneys at the embassy here to have a legal, law abiding immigrant, with a valid permanent visa (moi), deported.

The US attorneys/embassy here have broken their own guidelines/laws that are issued by the Office of International Affairs in Washington.

The OIA advise US prosecutors and law enforcement worldwide on how to legally go about the capture and prosecution of those wanted in the USA.

These guidelines/laws have not been followed in my case, so breaching my constitutional rights to a speedy trial, 'Color of Law' statutes and due process, using the Philippines government, specifically the Bureau of Immigration to try and short-cut the proper legal system, in my capture and detention for 21 Months now....

Read Deportations, Expulsions or other Extra-Ordinary Renditions ...It's all there, the legal attaches at the American Embassy here in Manila are breaking their own laws/ guidelines in cahoots with the Philippine Bureau of Immigration, and it's plain to see.
The US Attorneys working out of the US Embassy, Manila are illegally taking a 'short cut' with my capture and detention, by using the BI to first arrest me without a warrant, detain me and then inform me that I am a 'Fugitive', which I was totally unaware of. ” - Gypsy

The US has informed Gypsy that they will not count the time he has been detained against a possible sentence levied against him in the US...

"In late 2013 after the BI tried to force me onto a US bound plane, I was visited by attaches from the US Embassy. They tried to talk me into dropping my case against deportation at the Court of Appeals in Manila, and voluntarily deporting to London, England. They said that I would just use up all of my funds and effort and time whilst still being detained in the Philippines, in a futile attempt at seeking justice, because the justice system in the Philippines is so corrupt, constipated and easily influenced by the US....

I said that I would not leave without my wife and kids, then they said that they would help me do that, but they never did." - Gypsy

So ICMag has started a fundraiser to get bail for Gypsy. You can help by contributing what you can (Please contact Oldpink for more information). Gypsy has kept ICMag alive all this time, despite being detained and running out of money. We owe him a debt of gratitude for that and everything else he has done for the cannabis community.

The Eleventh Annual IC 420 was held again this year in Amsterdam, city of its origin. When Gypsy Nirvana hosted the first get-together, barbecue and smoke-out on the patio of his shop, no one realized what would happen over the ensuing decade, but here we are, and the cup still rules!

A huge congratulations to the dedicated breeders and growers whose efforts shine forth upon the International Cannagraphers as an example to the world of fine cannabis. The staff of volunteers that put on this spectacle tirelessly year after year deserve mention also. Certainly Gaiusmarius is deserving of a superior being award for doing all that he does :) Having helped with one Cup, I know what it takes.

Tea-is-back is especially noteworthy for his macro photographs of the entries he judged for the cup.

Jahnice and Trichomefarmer as always are huge supporters of the cup, and the website. This year they repeated their photo shoot on the Magere Brug for us to enjoy. Check out the lock with the combination set to 420! As you may remember the occasion was enlightened last year by the appearance of a stripper and her photographer - all captured by our intrepid Jahnice! Nice going indeed :)

OldPink is hugely important to the ongoing success of these events, and this year was on hand with his crew from up North. OldPink's impressions of his visit are here to see also. We will have a gallery of his images on the website, which include over 100 closeup shots of the entries ready to go to the judges. Fascinating :)

And a special thanks to Strandvasker, who had the cups prepared for our winners! They are nice pieces ready to be filled with buds by the winners. I am looking forward to seeing pictures of that on the website.

AN ADVENTURE WITH RED RIDER

CARTAGENA, COLOMBIA

International Cannagraphic

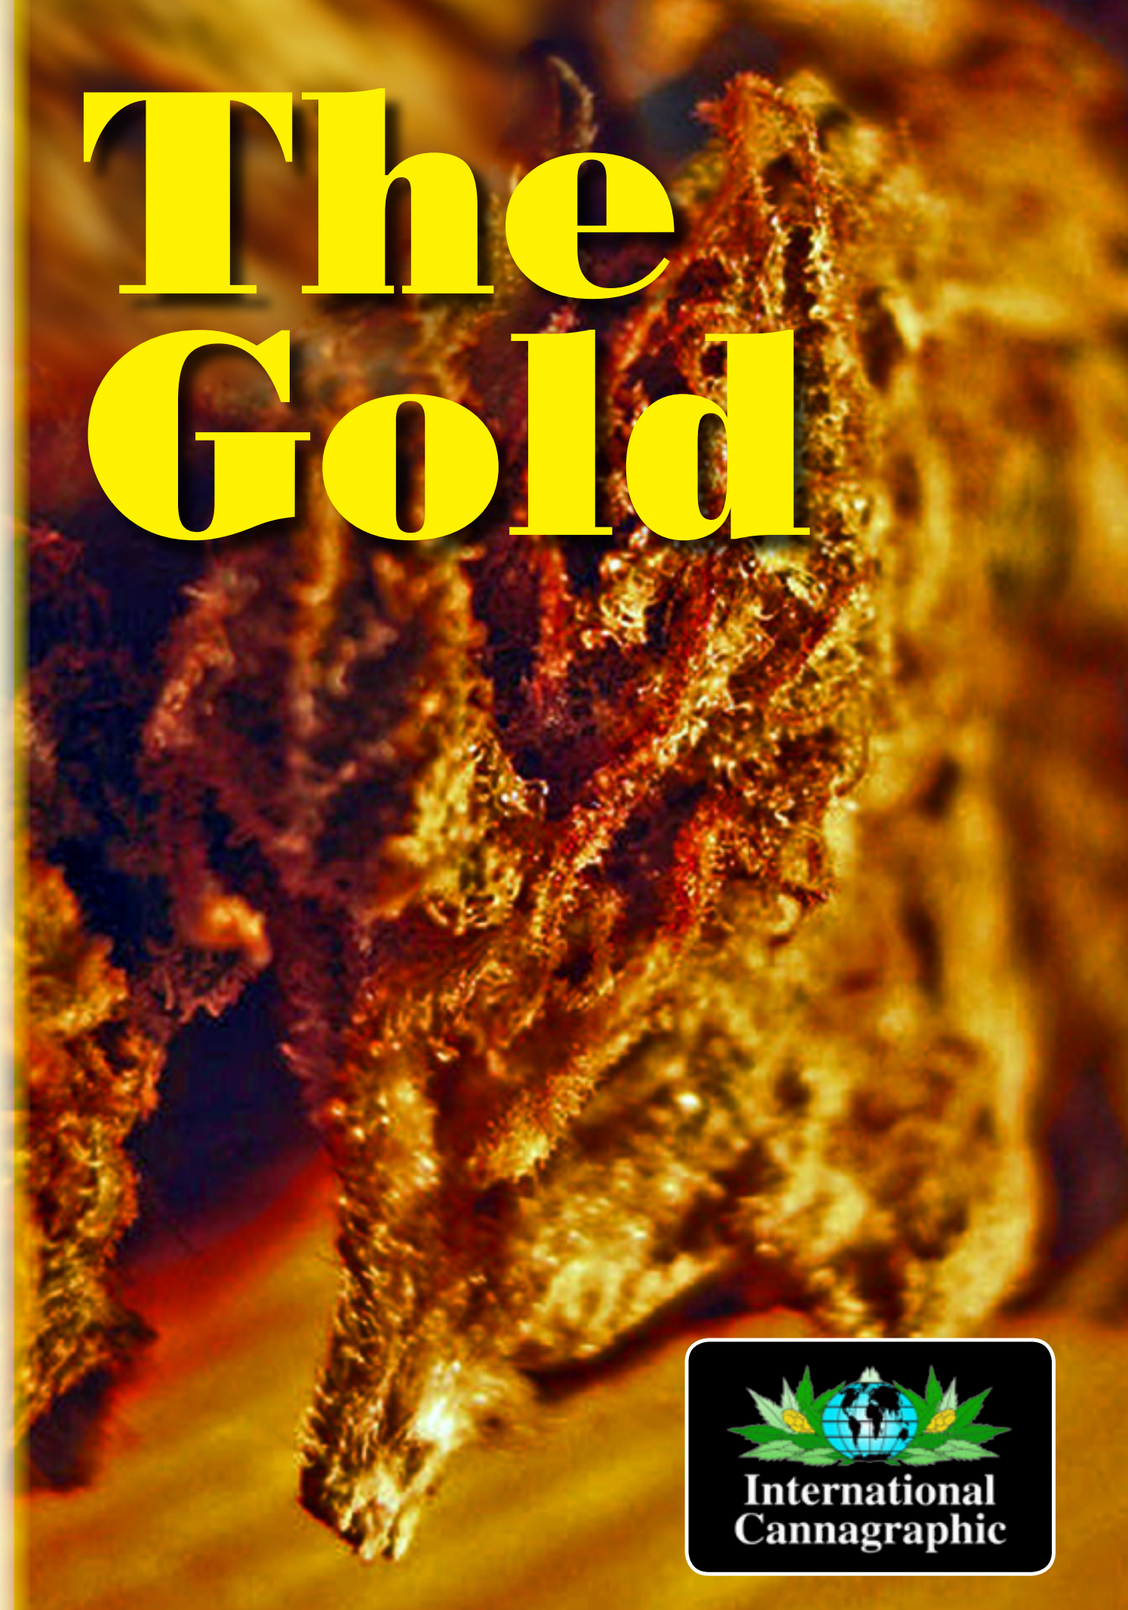
Located on the Caribbean coast, this vibrant port city is the gateway to the interior of Colombia. International Cannagraphic correspondent Red Rider arrived here many years ago and has had many adventures in his quest to find the original Colombian Gold cannabis strains.

The Gold

Hello everyone, I thought it might be nice to re-live some fine Colombian memories.
Here are some pictures of plants and bud I obtained when I first moved here decades ago.

I first smoked Colombian back in the mid ‘70s but around ‘85 it disappeared. After the year 2000, I returned to Colombia and not only found the great old Colombian Gold, but also grew it for myself.

The Colombian Gold I know is golden green/brown to almost blond in color and has a distinct sweet taste. The original happy weed has the unique ability to make any situation seem better. Not known as the most potent Colombian, but still more than adequate to get the job done, even one hit gets you there. A very euphoric long-lasting effect that really satisfies your cannabis itch. Colombian Gold is an all-time favorite classic and I always keep it near.



These girls grew in my courtyard in ‘04. When I cut down the huge Sativa plant, the woman upstairs came down and asked me why I took it. I told her it was time to harvest it, and gave her a lump of the Punto Rojo dry sift I had. That night I had to knock on their door and ask if they could keep it down. She and her husband were getting it on so loud it woke our baby up. They said ‘okay,’ but not five minutes later they were at it again!

International Cannagraphic

One of my best experiences was when visiting the mountain villages where my wife had relatives, and my experience with an old time grower was unique.

When I met the grower, I had no idea this guy had anything at all to do with cannabis. He was just one of a few gentlemen I was introduced to with the wife during our visit. After the introduction the wife went in the house, the men stayed outside to talk.

The usual gringo questions were asked like where are you from, how do you like Colombia and so on.

Then the conversation turned to “Aguardiente” and a bottle appeared.

Colombians are very proud of their local Aguardiente, and these guys wanted me to have a taste.

One never refuses an offer of food or drink, as it is considered rude here. So I had a shot, and of course had to make a big fuss about how good it was. One man mentioned his daughter going to live in Washington, DC.

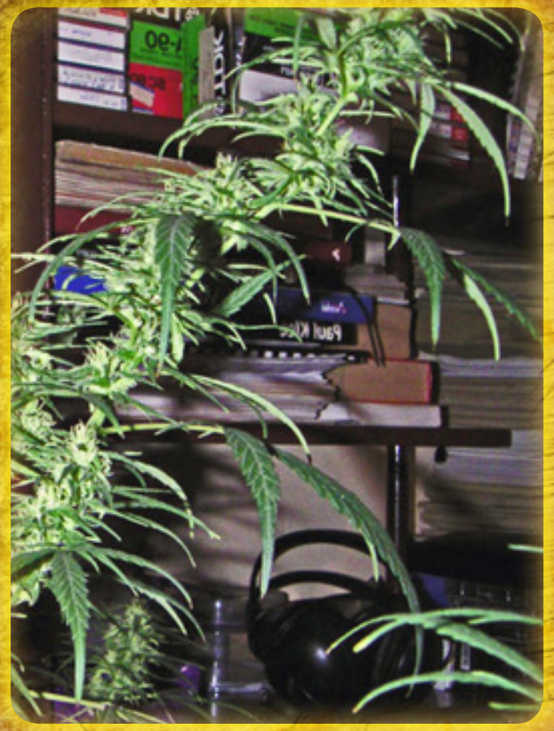
I was feeling pretty good from the 3 or 4 shots of aguardiente and mentioned to him that 4 states and DC have legalized cannabis. He said he had heard that, then began telling me about growing and selling (for export) cannabis in the early ‘70s. Of course, I told him I enjoyed smoking and the Colombian I had in the ‘70s was the best yet.

With that he grabbed the bottle and invited me to follow him. We walked around the back of the old farm house and had another shot. He opened the lid on a big clay pot sitting in the corner of the porch and pulled out a nice handful of golden buds and handed it to me. I was blown away, totally not expecting that, I quickly stuffed the bud into my jacket pocket.

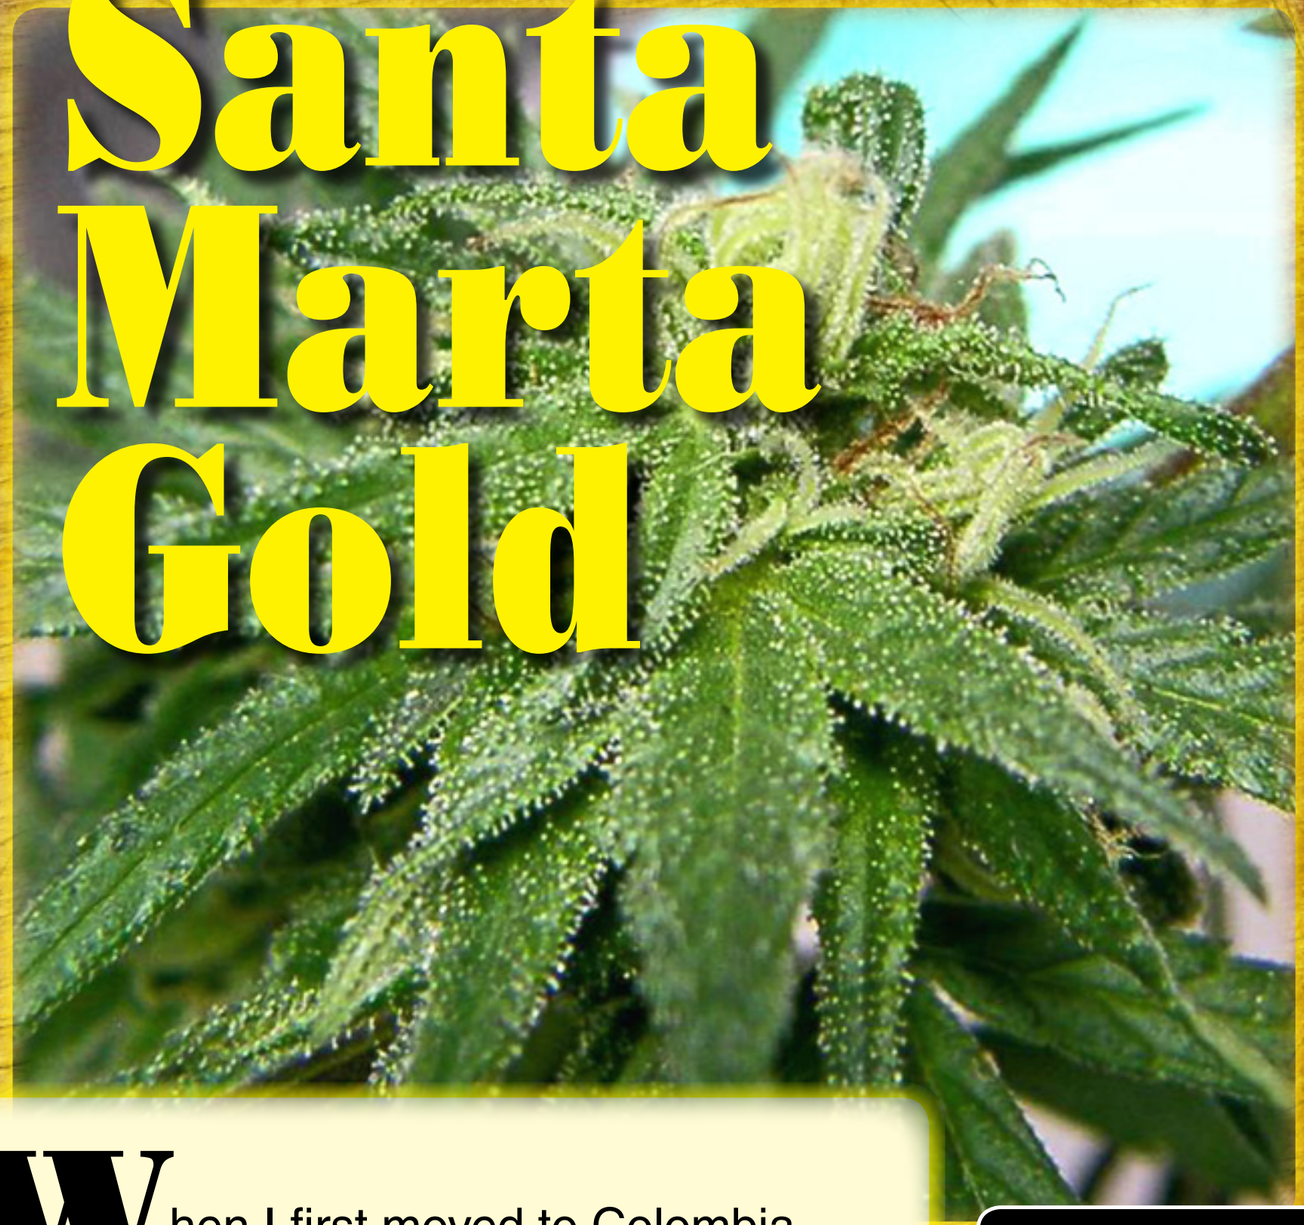
Now I really wanted to smoke, but the situation just wasn’t right, so we continued talking.

Soon it was time to leave and head back to the hotel for dinner. After a quick goodbye and hearty ‘thank you’ to Carlos and the rest of the family, we were off.

What a great day that was!



Santa Marta Gold



When I first moved to Colombia in 2003 the crippy had not yet invaded...Santa Marta Gold was what I first grew, with seeds from a friend.

International Cannagraphic

This is Boyacá.
This department (state) feels very comfortable and safe. Great people, the best fresh food and drink, with a perfect year-round climate.

Boyacá is located in the Andean Region in central Colombia, spread over the Cordillera Oriental mountain range and covers a total area of 23,189 km.

Boyacá is known as “The Land of Freedom” because this region was the scene of a series of battles which led to Colombia’s independence from Spain. The first was on 25 July 1819 in the Pantano de Vargas, and the final and decisive battle known as the Battle of Boyacá was fought on 7 August 1819 at Puente de Boyacá.

Villa de Leyva is considered one of the finest colonial villages of Colombia, and was declared a National Monument on December 17, 1954 to preserve its architecture.

Paipa is a town and municipality in the Colombian Department of Boyacá.

Somewhere in this area my finca awaits me, I will know it when I find it, or it will find me!

These are the seeds I've collected and would like to begin working on the farm.

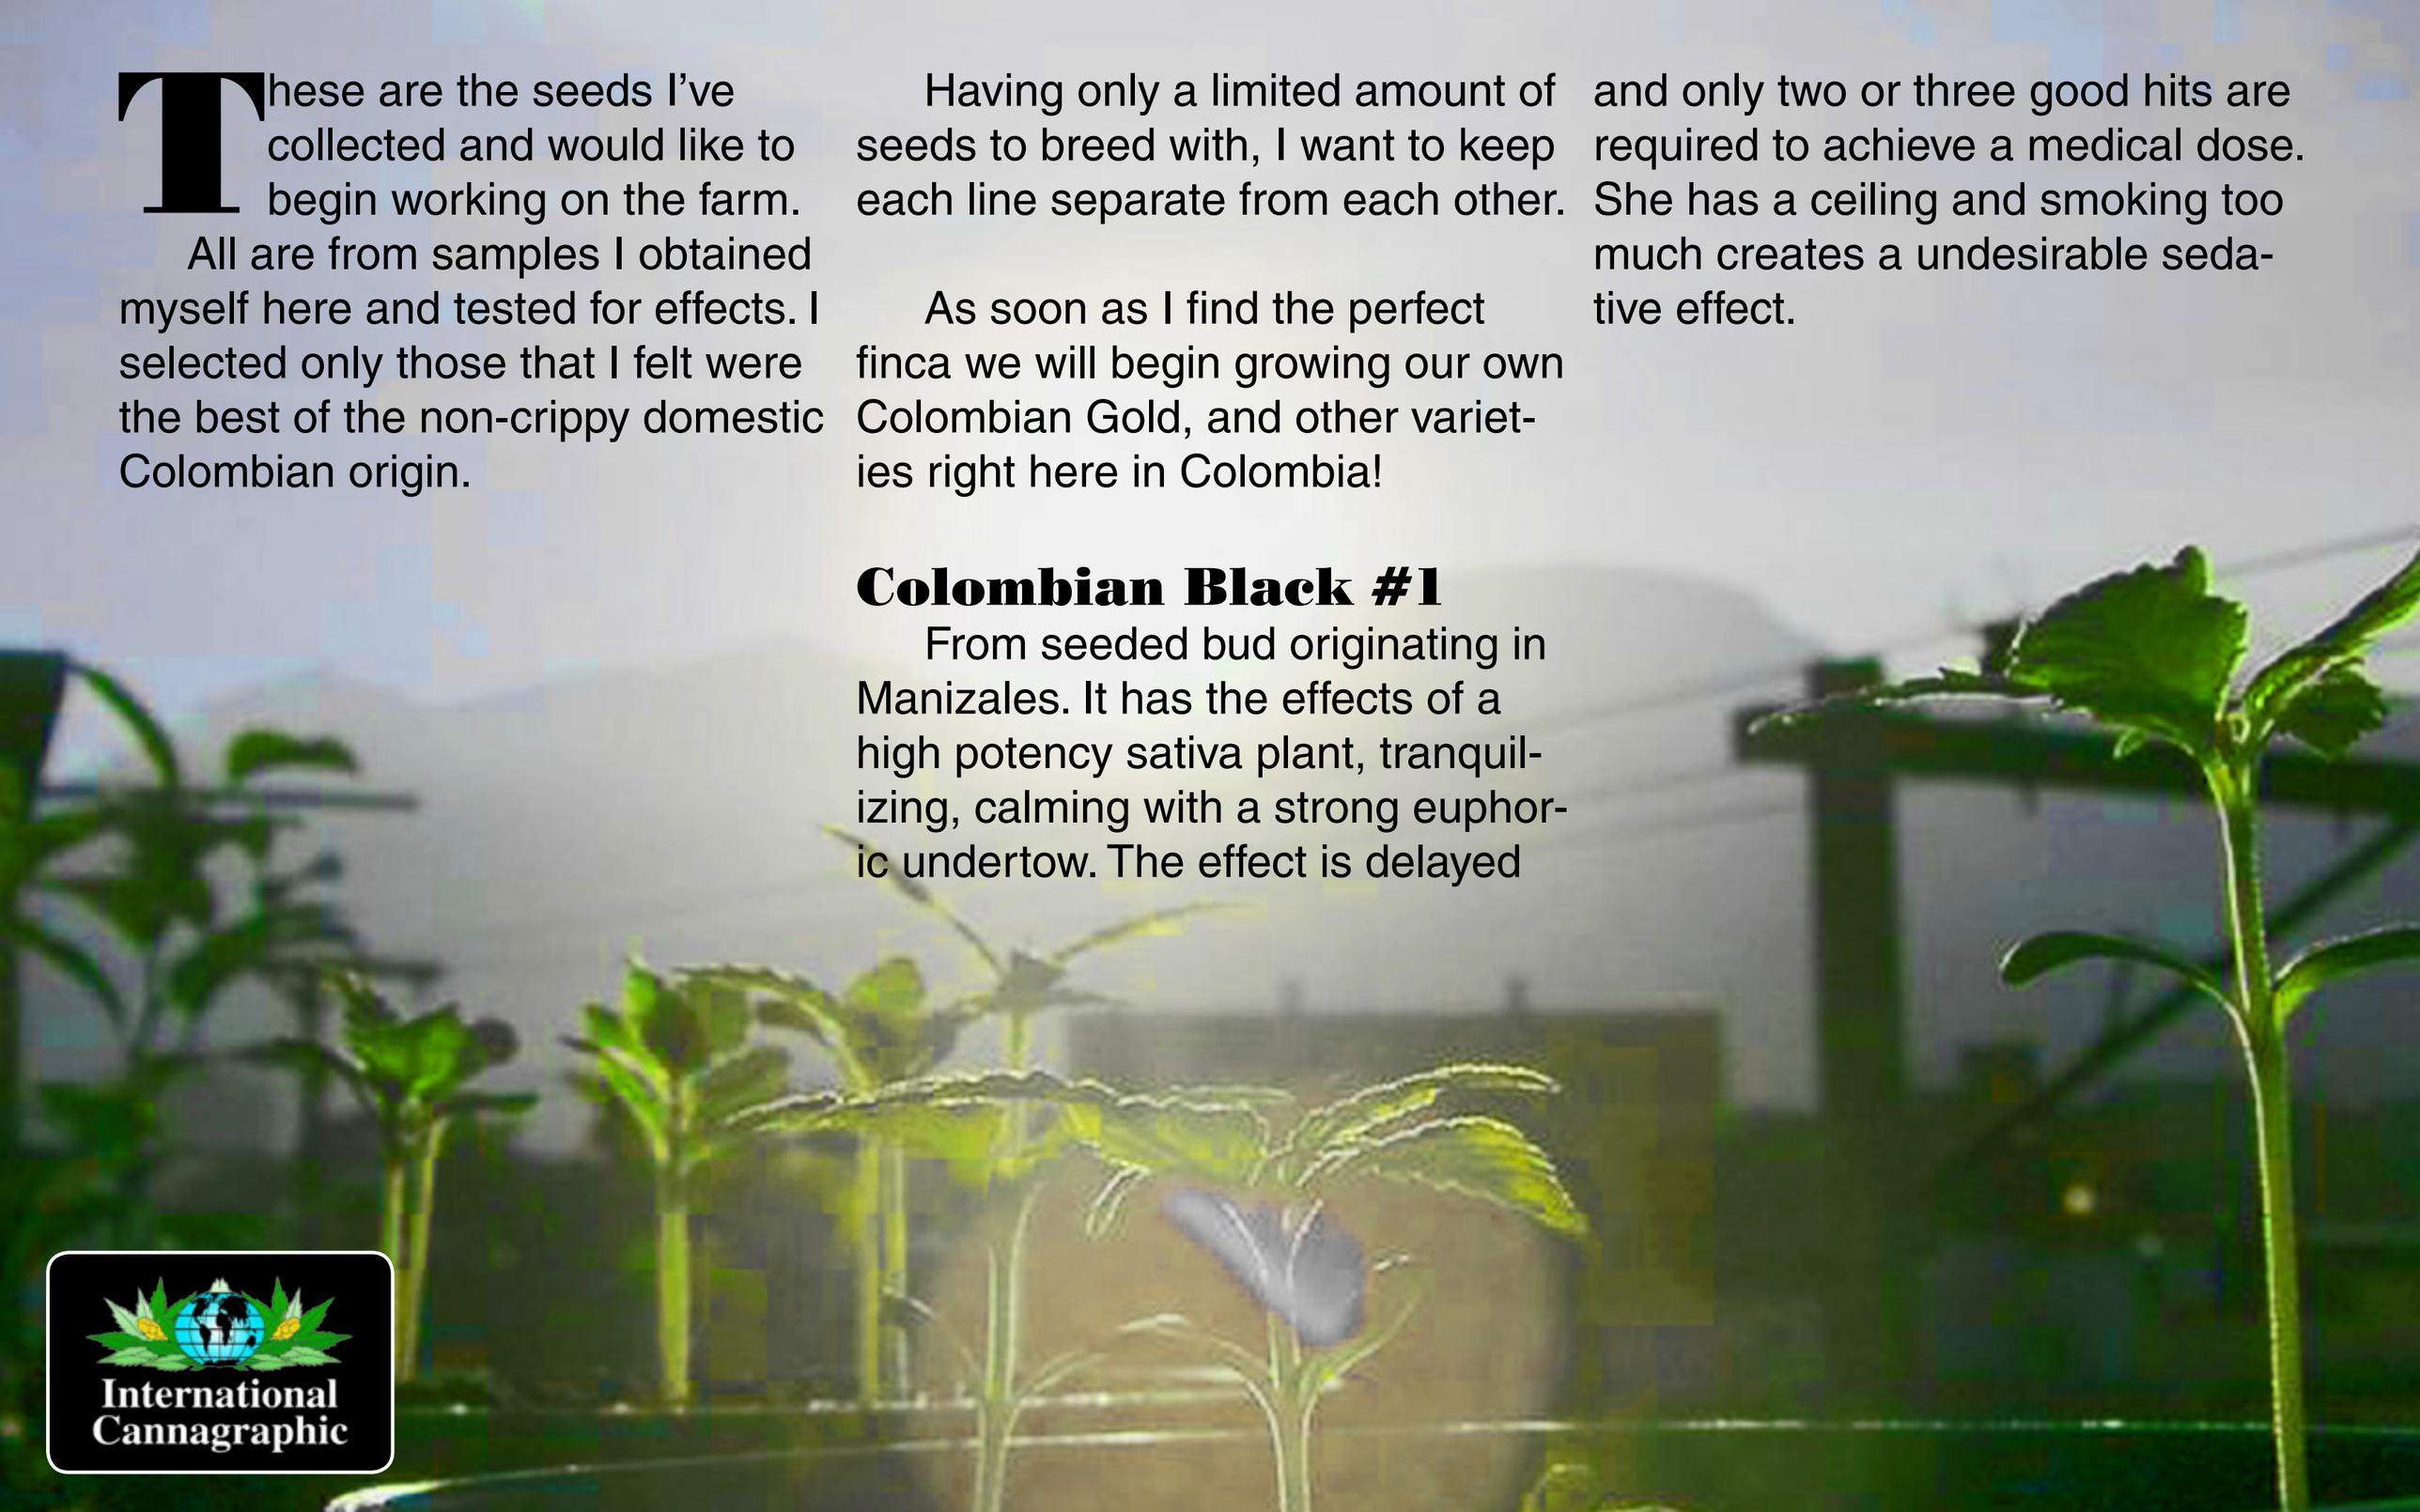
All are from samples I obtained myself here and tested for effects. I selected only those that I felt were the best of the non-crippy domestic Colombian origin.

Having only a limited amount of seeds to breed with, I want to keep each line separate from each other.

As soon as I find the perfect finca we will begin growing our own Colombian Gold, and other varieties right here in Colombia!

Colombian Black #1

From seeded bud originating in Manizales. It has the effects of a high potency sativa plant, tranquilizing, calming with a strong euphoric undertow. The effect is delayed and only two or three good hits are required to achieve a medical dose. She has a ceiling and smoking too much creates a undesirable sedative effect.



It's somewhat thought provoking, given proper stimulation. Not bright or overly happy but still optimistic within the thought train, making for a good positive overall experience. It finishes with a sleepy but refreshing effect and is a better evening smoke.

Tolerance is moderate, recommended no more than once a day for maximum effect.

Colombian Black #2

From an especially potent seeded bud of Cauche, obtained in Bogota. Very narcotic effect, strong with almost instant onset. Rich, heavy taste with expansion and coughing in the lungs. Crushed flowers were very sticky and had to be cut rather than broken up to burn.

Super potent for Cauche, overall it's devastating, with long-lasting duration. No hiding the fact you're medicated with this. It has a hangover if abused (not bad) and the finish is very sleepy, but no headache or body pains.

Colombian Red

When I returned to Bogota in 2011, Colombian Red found me. She didn't look very good, a big clump of reddish brown seeded tops. With a subtle but spicy red hash (Lebanese?) musty smell that was interesting.

On closer inspection the buds were very red, rusty-colored and covered in fuzzy resin. The taste is sharp and distinct with that unmistakable Colombian flavor. But the effect is what really got me, like a hammer from God, this stuff smacks you square in the head from the first contact.

It overtakes you instantly, so deep sex is the first thought. This weed has the best "aphrodisiac" properties in the world (to me). Some of the other effects are very red eyes, a stupid look, and dry mouth. Not good for all-day smoking.

Best for special indoor events with like-minded partners of the sexual kind (your choice).

Golden Corinto

Nice semi pressed finger length buds that were moderately seeded. Not “fuzzy” or particularly sticky, no special scent. Actually not very potent, not overwhelming but you certainly felt her effect. The effect starts right away with an uplifting, mood brightening feeling that sort of sweeps you in to euphoric bliss.

With this, the more you smoke, the happier you get, high and higher until laughter. Really good stuff, great while having a couple beers since it has no downer effect at all.

Very little tolerance although you do end up smoking more with daily use but always able to hit that happy spot.

Golden Sativa

Similar in effect to the Golden Corinto, however this strain is noticeably stronger and slightly more exaggerated in effect. Long fingers, thick, slightly pressed, fully seeded buds.

All seeds were fully mature and buds covered in a golden fuzz, sticky to the touch.

The effect comes on a little slower and the taste is sharper and more pronounced.

The same “happy” feeling starts coming on and building. Then in a euphoric frenzy I begin to feel incredibly creative, and inspired to write or build something useful.

It’s a wonderful motivational sensation that continues till the effect leaves you. The effect alone is awesome enough but the best part of the effect is the finish. It just ends, no after affect at all, it’s like you were never high, never that high.

International Cannagraphic

It is known that in order to grow premium cannabis, long periods of intense light are required. Indisputably the sun is the most powerful light source on the earth, and that tells me the best plants come from outdoor grows under natural sunshine.

So, I think that better light results in better pot. And where on earth is the most intense sunshine? The tropics of course!

No winter, and year-round sunlight. Now here's the icing on the cake, high altitudes experience stronger sunlight. So tropical latitudes at extreme altitude equals extraordinarily great cannabis lighting. Colombia also boasts a uniquely fertile soil medium for growing, due to its volcanic origins.

If you have all these factors and the right strain, you should have a perfect expression of the Colombian Gold cannabis genetics!

Within Colombia are many micro-climates. Within 50 miles of Bogota there are over 130 distinct micro-climates, and I'm betting one of those is the perfect climate for my very own cannabis finca. I hope to find it soon! ~RedRider

Weed Seed Shop has introduced three new feminized strains.

The Weed Seed Shop range is enriched and extended with the arrival of Super Cheese, K -Train and Super Silver Cheese . These easy to grow cannabis seeds combine the positive qualities of Skunk and Cheese; Trainwreck and Kush; and finally, Cheese and Haze. The new cannabis strains are an exciting new option for both the grower and the end user.

with a powerful bite

Feminized Super Cheese is an easy to grow, stable Skunk cross with the pervasive stoned effect of Cheese. The abundant yield this strain produces will be sure to satisfy discerning growers, and for consumers this pungent and powerful indica hybrid promises ultimate relaxation combined with a high propensity towards a severe case of the giggles. A must for all Cheese connoisseurs!

K -Train
India meets the USA

K -Train Feminized is a promising combination of Kush and Trainwreck . This new strain offers a powerful cross of indica strains from India with a high level sativa strain from America. K-Train Feminized generates a long-lasting high while being easy to grow, producing strong , bushy plants. Benefitting from a short flowering period, the strain produces a high yield of bud smelling of sweet oranges and citrus fruit with an earthy undertone. What more could anyone ask for?

High Haze
relaxing Cheese

Feminized Super Silver Cheese results from the combination of Super Silver Haze and Cheese, resulting in a spiritual, ecstatic high combined with a relaxing body stone. The desirable balance between strong growth , moderate height gain and rewarding harvest should satisfy all growers while the characteristic aroma of Cheese, softened with chamomile and musky elements from the Haze parent, will certainly delight those lucky enough to try it.

A Sativa Rx For Couples

by Mr. Alkaline

Red Matrimony is a pure sativa which was created and released to try and help save the world. This is not average cannabis. This is a red sativa of brotherly love and unity. It is a fun sativa with a serious minded goal, which is to treat human suffering both inside the mind, and in the heart of man and woman alike.

Red Matrimony has what I call a red cross or a red rose high. And as such, she treats the mind and the heart properly, and with love.

More than just a mere dignified up high, she acts to lessen one's needs and lusts for prescription drugs. Also, she can help couples move into more successful relationships. She accomplishes this by putting you into the exact frame of mind and body where you feel more ready and resilient, poised to go forth and work things out, right inside of the relationship. This is why she has the name of Red Matrimony!

She is a very stabilized red sativa with a real relationship oriented smoke, one that is not harsh but very smooth, all the way through. Red Matrimony reflects the greatest powers of nature, based on her infinite intelligence. She puts it to work inside the blood and bones of man. This is far beyond the concept of a smart weed.

But it was the thought-provoking smart sativa that I was seeking out. It was a Mr. Souls Jack Herer female named Genius which led me here to ICMag, only to land me at Red Matrimony instead. She is such an important and profound discovery that I want the whole world to have and enjoy this strain.

If you guess that her ‘high’ lowers blood pressure and decreases mental and physical ailing, you’d be correct, but this is just the tip of an iceberg!

This is because she has a very large range of vibrations inside her, precisely designed to eliminate the need for a medicine cabinet.

Red Matrimony is a modern marvel, or a natural masterpiece of medicinal cannabis formation. She represents some of the finest medicinal vibrations, inside the cannabis plant, on earth!

Here is a list of the benefits and riches that one may enjoy through the regular, happy usage of Red Matrimony.

Experiential effects for individuals are as follows:

Revitalizing, restorative and regenerative to the mind, body, and spirit. Red Matrimony is also gently stimulating, inspirational, meditative, blissful, positive minded, enthusiastic, attentive, alert, clear, focused, grounding, balancing, integrating, anti-anxiety, anti-inflammatory, anti-depressant, anti-psychotic, vasodilating, uplifting, calming, energizing, optimizing, correcting, pro-intuitive, purpose oriented, and lastly, perhaps most importantly,

Red Matrimony does not inhibit coordination or place limitations on motor skill functioning through the central nervous system.
Red Matrimony is a time-saving device in the truest sense of the word. Especially in a world that's always looking for better, faster, cheaper products, solutions, remedies, and medicines. To me, there's no surer route to the legalization of cannabis, and subsequent global spread of the safest cannabis medicines, than by way of putting Red Matrimony out there, for people to use and appreciate as an example of good medicine.

In comparison to most medicines in the world, Red Matrimony can do the most good for the most people in the shortest amount of time than practically any other drug. And to be clear, Red Matrimony is not a panacea, a be-all and cure-all, but offers a broad range of positive effects, sure to please most everyone.

It is my firm belief that there is nothing new in or from our great Mother Nature. There is merely a new awareness of natural medicine, and a new truth coming out into wide public view.

We, the people of this planet, need to open our eyes to realize and see what we need most, is what is all around us. And for this reason alone Red Matrimony is a big deal.

I came looking for smart weed only to find the most ingenious medicine, well beyond my dreams and expectations. Yet, in all sincerity, this super-sacred, highly advanced biological life-form and self-replicating wonder drug, has actually found me!

Editor's Note:
Red Matrimony is a new strain discovered and developed by Mr. Alkaline and Antenna Seed Company. Seed testing is now underway, and we hope to see this strain available to the public sometime this year. Red Matrimony is another strain developed, and popularized by the International Cannagraphic's tireless researchers. It all starts with a seed, and together we can change the world.

RED MATRIMONY

International Cannagraphic

The back story:

I began the line with 25 F1 seeds purchased on SeedBay from a breeder named MOD who ran the Mist of Destruction seed company back in 2005-2007 was when it was at auction. The price was 30 USD per 10 seeds.

I bought 2 packs and received 5 seeds of these as freebies with a different order.

25 total seeds, 24 of those had green stems, only one was red. A male.

The smoke from the F2 was good but not fire stuff, and all the plants were green!

But I wanted red plants so I kept on another generation.

The F3 was when the real traits in those red genes surfaced. Now, everything is set in stone. I feel complete now.

Cannabis Legalization News

by Skip Stone

The Caribbean: There's suddenly a growing interest in legalizing cannabis for medical, recreational and religious purposes, spreading thru the Caribbean. Island leaders are rushing to change the laws, hoping to spur their economies, encourage medical tourism and help those who need medical marijuana.

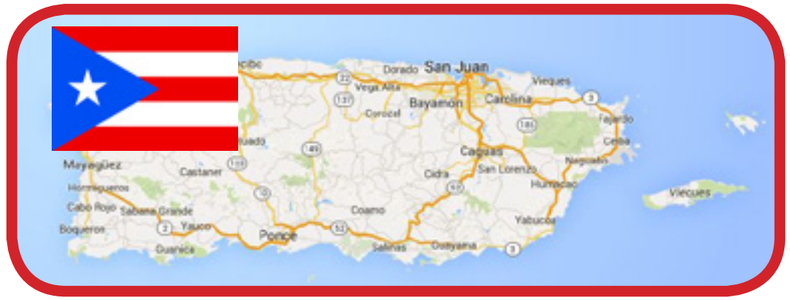
Jamaica: At long last, Jamaica has legalized medical marijuana, decriminalized possession of small amounts and finally recognized the rasta's rights to use ganja as a religious sacrament. Possession of up to 2 ounces of marijuana, may result in a small fine, but no longer is it a criminal offense. The new law allows up to five plants per household. No doubt this will put tourists and locals at ease when it comes to the sacred herb. High Times has announced they will host a cannabis event in Jamaica later this year.

Jamaicans are expected to begin marketing marijuana products. The Marley family have got trademarks ready to go:

"Marley Natural will offer premium cannabis products that honor the life and legacy of Bob Marley as well as his belief in the benefits of cannabis," offering "heirloom Jamaican cannabis strains inspired by those Bob Marley enjoyed."

Cannabis Legalization News



Puerto Rico: This island territory of the US has just legalized medical marijuana. Gov. Alejandro Garcia Padilla signed an executive order legalizing cannabis for medical conditions, immediately. The Health department has three months to decide how to implement the new law and which conditions will be covered.

US Virgin Islands: Marijuana possession was decriminalized last December in the Virgin Islands. Senators voted 14-0 (!!!) to override Gov. John P. DeJongh's line-item veto of the law in the 2015 budget.

Reef Bay, St. John USVI

So now possession of an ounce or less is punishable by a fine of not more than $200 and is no longer a criminal offense.

Argentina: 150,000 Argentinians took to the streets of Buenos Aires on May 2, to demand the legalization of cannabis and the right to grow it, as part of the Global Marijuana March.

Cannabis Legalization News

Italy: The Italian Army has started a huge medical marijuana grow in Florence. Their goal is to lower the price of cannabis for patients from $35 a gram to as low as $5 gram. They are expecting to grow 220 pounds a year to distribute to pharmacies who can legally sell it to medical patients with a doctor's prescription. It is still illegal to grow or sell marijuana in Italy.

The Netherlands: While other countries are busy legalizing and decriminalizing cannabis, the Dutch have turned their backs on decades of successful marijuana policies. With the conservative government still cracking down on coffeeshops and cannabis tourism, it's starting to affect the long-standing perception of Holland as being cannabis friendly. Yes, you can still buy cannabis at coffeeshops, but it's lower potency and higher priced. Dutch cannabis users have begun forming clandestine clubs like those in Spain, where they can share higher quality homegrown, rather than high priced gang-produced cannabis.

Meanwhile, the new Growshop Act, which took effect in March, cracks down on any business providing services to large scale growers. This is causing growshops and other cannabis related businesses to close or alter their business models. The wording of the Act is vague, thus allowing for a wide interpretation.

"He who prepares, processes, offers for sale, sells, delivers, provides, transports, produces or has at his disposal materials or objects, or has means of transport, areas, money, other means of payment, or data at its disposal, relating to which he knows or has serious grounds to suspect that they are intended for committing the punishable offences pursuant to the provisions in Article 11, paragraphs 3 and 5, will be sentenced to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years or a category 5 monetary fine."

Thus a chill has gone through the Dutch cannabiz community as they wait to see how strictly these new rules are enforced. Can the Dutch afford to lose more cannabis tourists?

US Legalization

The battle between the states and the Feds over legalizing marijuana continues. New legislation has been introduced in Congress to address the conflict between federal and state law on the subject of cannabis. This bill would reinforce states rights, something even the most conservative politicians in Congress support. So there is a chance this could actually pass!

The Respect State Marijuana Laws Act of 2015 would alter the Controlled Substances Act by providing immunity for people and businesses that comply with state marijuana statutes. This would help cannabis related businesses do banking and carry on like any other business.

Marijuana and Workplace Drug Testing

"US Department of Labor estimates that drug and alcohol users drained an estimated $82bn from businesses due to lost productivity in the year studied."

To test or not to test? That is the question, and thousands of employers are trying to find the answer.

Now that four states have legalized recreational cannabis and 23 states have legalized medical marijuana, employers find themselves in a quandary when it comes to drug testing for cannabis at work.

With the increasing use of marijuana, employers must now choose between completely drug free employees or making an exception for those who use cannabis, off work, in their own time. Stats show 10% of all US employees use illegal drugs. Do they want to fire those who test positive for cannabis use, even if they're well qualified for the job and their home cannabis use does not interfere with their performance?

"The most recent figures from drug-testing company Quest Diagnostics show that positive results for marijuana use in the workforce rose 6.2 % in 2013. This contributed to the first rise in positives for overall drug testing since 2003. In the two states that legalized recreational marijuana use before the report was issued, the increase was even more pronounced: in Washington, use was up by 23%, and rose by 20% in Colorado."

The courts are going to have to balance privacy rights with employer needs. Already lawsuits are multiplying over drug-testing at the workplace. So far employers are winning the right to not hire and to fire those who use marijuana. But as the effects of legalization take hold, and more employees have THC in their bloodstream, businesses will find themselves having problems finding qualified employees.

So does marijuana use deserve to be treated like alcohol use by employers?

It is a recreational and medical drug whose use off the job, should be accepted and not vilified. Nor should those whose performance at work is unaffected be penalized for their use of cannabis.

On the state level, 2015 is turning out a bumper crop of initiatives and legislation across the US. Never has there been such a rush to legalize and regulate marijuana possession, growing and sales. Some states have as many as two dozen cannabis related bills awaiting action.

The push to regulate marijuana like alcohol seems to be gathering steam in the progressive states. Meanwhile more conservative states are coming to grips with the essential need for seriously ill patients including children to have safe access to medical marijuana, especially high CBD strains and their extracts.

Alabama: As one of the most conservative states in the country, Alabama is not expected to legalize marijuana anytime soon. Despite passing Carly's Law last year, allowing people with seizures who take CBD oil to defend their use in court, Senate Bill 326, the Medical Marijuana Safe Access Act, appears dead, killed by a committee member who refuses to allow any legal marijuana in the state.

Alaska: House Bill 123 would create a Marijuana Control Board to regulate the growing and sales of cannabis in Alaska. Recreational marijuana was approved by Alaskans last year.

Arizona: The Campaign to Regulate Marijuana Like Alcohol is trying to get 150,000 signatures to place the initiative on the 2016 ballot in Arizona. It would allow adults 21 and over to purchase marijuana and it would regulate the production and distribution of cannabis.

California: There are high expectations that California will legalize recreational marijuana in 2016. The big questions are who will determine what the new law is and who will implement it. With several citizen initiatives in the works for 2016, the California legislature is hoping to get in on the act with at least three new bills making their way thru the system.

The big difference among them is who would be empowered to enforce these new regulations.

Assembly Bill 34, supported by the California Cannabis Industry Association and the Emerald Growers Association (EGA) of Northern California, would hand regulation and enforcement to the Alcoholic Beverage Control, the state department of Public Health and the department of Food and Agriculture, rather than the police. Localities could ban or limit growing and sales via zoning ordinances as is currently the case all around California.

The Medical Marijuana Public Safety and Environmental Protection Act (SB 643), focuses on the environmental impacts of growing. This bill would require all cannabis to be certified organic by 2022, and eliminate the illegal use of public streams and pollution into waterways from grows and improve the quality of marijuana grown and sold in the state.

AB 266, sponsored by the California Police Chiefs Association and the League of California Cities, allows local politicans and police to regulate and enforce marijuana laws. The state would issue licenses for cultivation and sales. Existing local ordinances would be respected.

The California Craft Cannabis Initiative would "recognize and protect California's world-famous cannabis appellations and cultivars." Perhaps even more important, it would eliminate all cannabis-related crimes for adults ages 21 and over.

Connecticut: Three bills that would liberalize Connecticut's marijuana laws are making their way thru the legislature. Both HB 6473 and HB 6703 would allow Connecticut's adults to use cannabis for recreation. 52% of all voters, and 80% of voters under 30 years old, support legalizing the possession of marijuana for adults in Connecticut. HB 5892, would allow minors with qualifying medical conditions to use marijuana.

Colorado: One year after legalizing recreational marijuana, 62 percent favor it in Colorado, while 34 percent are opposed.

In a sign of the times, Colorado state officials are having to defend their recent marijuana legalization in court.

Colorado argues that states don't have the right to invalidate the laws in other states just because they don't like them. It's not known whether the Supreme Court will hear the case or when that might happen.

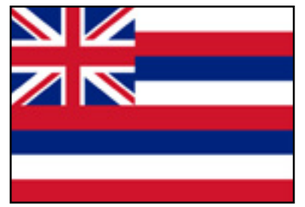
Read more at this link.

In a blow to High Times and other cannabis event organizers in Colorado, the state's Marijuana Enforcement Division (MED), has ruled that providing free samples of marijuana at public events like the HT Cannabis Cup is forbidden. They've gone so far as to state that no exhibitors would be allowed in the designated smoking areas. If this is fully enforced, it will put a big damper on such events as many attend to sample the different strains of cannabis.

Nebraska and Oklahoma have brought suit in the U.S. Supreme Court against Colorado for allowing open sales of "illegal" cannabis in retail outlets. They claim they're being "injured" by the increasing use and importation of marijuana from Colorado by having to spend more on law enforcement.

Florida: Florida is finally getting into the act with SB 528, The Florida Medical Marijuana Act. This would prevent patients getting arrested for using marijuana with a doctor's recommendation. It would also provide patients with safe and reliable access to medical marijuana. Attempts by Gov. Rick Scott to force welfare recipients to get drug tested was rebuffed by the Appellate and Supreme Courts.

Georgia: Gov. HB 1, Haleigh's Hope Act, became law in April. This new law, lets qualified patients possess up to 20 fluid ounces of low-THC cannabis oils with a doctors' recommendation. Georgia has also begun issuing medical marijuana identification cards. Yet it's still illegal to purchase or possess marijuana in Georgia. Currently, possession of as little as two ounces of marijuana can get you 10 years in prison in Georgia!



Hawaii: Over two dozen cannabis related bills have been introduced in the Hawaii legislature. The bills would allow for medical marijuana dispensaries and/or legalize recreational use for adults. Thus far Hawaiians have had few victories in the fight to legalize cannabis. With 57% of Hawaii's residents now supporting full legalization and regulation (a 20% increase since 2005), it's likely one or more bills will pass this year.

Louisiana: Several bills have been introduced to setup a program for medical marijuana patients, to reduce the state's harsh penalties for possession and to regulate marijuana like alcohol. Polls indicate 53% of residents want to regulate cannabis like alcohol.

Maryland: Maryland is getting on the bus, with SB 517, which would eliminate marijuana paraphernalia as a criminal offense, and impose a civil fine of up to $500 for public smoking.

Maryland's Second Chance Act would let those with non-violent convictions like possessing marijuana or paraphernalia request their records be sealed from employers and schools. This is yet another stigma that marijuana users have had to endure for decades, often ruining the futures of otherwise law abiding young people.

Unfortunately, a bill to regulate and tax marijuana like alcohol did not make it this year.

Read more at this link.

Massachusetts: The legislature is considering H.1561, a bill that would regulate marijuana like alcohol, but Gov. Charlie Baker has said he will not legalize marijuana. But the Campaign to Regulate Marijuana Like Alcohol will attempt to get to get an initiative on the ballot in time for 2016 elections.

Missouri: Missouri legislators say "show me the cannabis" as three new legalization bills were introduced. One would legalize and regulate possession and sales of cannabis, like in Colorado and Washington state. Another would remove previous cannabis convictions and the third would allow for medical marijuana. Current law in Missouri doles out seven years for more than 35 grams of cannabis so any change would be welcome.

Nevada: Because the state legislature failed to vote on an initiative to legalize marijuana, the public will now get a chance to vote on it.

Read more at this link.

Nevada has started to implement its medical marijuana system by issuing licenses for 55 dispensaries, 117 grow sites and 17 testing laboratories.

New Jersey: Bill A218 would impose a civil fine for the possession of up to 15 grams of marijuana, and other bills to treat marijuana like alcohol and improve New Jersey's lousy implementation of medical marijuana have been introduced in the New Jersey legislature. However, Governor Chris Christie has clearly indicated he will not legalize marijuana or even decriminalize it further.

New York: The state Department of Health is now accepting applications from those wanting to grow marijuana for the state's medical marijuana program. With hundreds of applications from all over the country expected, the state will hold a lottery this summer to determine who will get the five licenses the state will issue. It costs $10,000 for a non-refundable application fee, and $200,000 refundable fee for those selected into the program.

Mayor Bill DeBlasio, has ordered the NYPD to stop arresting people for possession of marijuana and instead to issue them civil citations.

Oregon: Oregon legalized recreational marijuana last year, but the Oregon Liquor Control Commission has yet to release detailed rules for retail sales, taxation or the "seed to sale" tracking system. So some state senators are pushing to open retail sales at already licensed medical marijuana dispensaries in the state to prevent the black market from growing.

"One of the problems we have is that on July 1, Oregonians will be able to possess, grow and gift marijuana...but they won't be able to legally buy it." - Senate Minority Leader Ted Ferrioli.

In the meantime, Oregon residents will be allowed to grow up to four marijuana plants and possess eight ounces at home. Oregon has 69,468 cannabis using medical patients with state issued cards supplied by 45,488 licensed growers and 222 licensed dispensaries. However, recreational sales are supposed to go through a separate system.

Read more at this link.

Pennsylvania: Medical Marijuana legislation is currently making its way thru the legislature as Senate Bill 3. Unfortunately this bill will only allow for people with certain severe medical conditions to gain access to cannabis. There is no provision in the bill to allow people to grow their own. Instead it restricts ingestion of cannabis via smoking or eating, only allowing oils, tinctures or creams to be used. This is one of the most conservative marijuana legalization bills, and it is expected to pass and get signed by the Governor.

Read more at this link.

Rhode Island: The Marijuana Regulation, Control, and Taxation Act, similar to legalization laws in Colorado and Washington state, would legalize recreational use of marijuana in Rhode Island. It would allow at least 10 dispensaries in the smallest state of the Union.

Texas: Yes, you read it right, Texas has finally got a couple of bills ((HB 3785) and (SB 1839) that would legalize medical marijuana, while one, HB 507, would reduce penalties and prevent arrests for personal possession of small amounts.

Vermont: With support for legalization coming from Gov. Peter Shumlin, Vermont seems poised to legalize marijuana in the near future. The Vermont Coalition to Regulate Marijuana is organizing support.

Virginia: Fifty-four percent of Virginia voters support recreational pot compared to 41 percent who oppose it.

Washington, D.C., Despite 70% of voters approving possession and growing of marijuana for personal use, the U.S. Congress has stopped D.C. from allowing retail sales. So a movement is underway, sharing seeds and encouraging people to grow their own!

Read more at this link.
And Here.

Washington State: Gov. Jay Inslee has signed into law a bill that sets up a registry for medical marijuana patients. This will allow those registered to posses three times as much cannabis as recreational users in the state, up to 3 ounces dry, 48 ounces of edibles, 216 ounces liquid and 21 grams of concentrates. They will also be allowed to grow up to 6 plants at home, unless authorized to grow more. If patients don't join the registry, they will have the same limits as recreational users in the state.

Wisconsin: Current Wisconsin law makes possession of marijuana a misdemeanor, punishable by six months in jail and/or a $1,000 fine. The second offense would be a felony. A new bill, introduced on 4/20 would provide for a fine only if caught with up to 25 grams of marijuana, but no jail time.

Amateurs Rule!

When I first got my hands on a good camera with a macro lens, I was impressed with how well it revealed the invisible world that exists all around us in miniature. Previously unimagined alien landscapes, became large enough to see in amazing detail. This inspired me to set out to explore the magical microscopic world of cannabis.

First stop: Amsterdam

A wise Dutchman by the name of Joop Dumay was at the Cannabis Cup selling beautiful prints of cannabis trichomes lit vividly against colorful backgrounds. The prints were in many sizes up to wall size. Joop is an interesting character. After the cup I visited him in Utrecht to see how he managed to get these incredibly clear images.

At right: Trichomes photographed by Professor P of Dynasty Seeds.

Using a projector built specially for the purpose at the nearby university, he would place a sample on a glass screen, place it into the machine where intensely bright, hot lights would project the image onto a wall-sized movie screen. He had a film camera on a tripod, and was taking pictures of these blowups, then sending out for professional prints of all sizes.

After just a few moments on the hot glass sample plate, the trichomes would melt and drip, ruining the little world within a cannabis flower. Joop became successful, and grew some awesome buds in his garden to keep his subject at hand so to speak. Having plenty of flowering buds is key to capturing these amazing images.

Within the next year I was playing with a Sony that had a great lens that went from macro to wide angle to zoom and had 5 megapixels.

At right: an image from M0nkey.

At the time I thought it was hot to have a 5 megapixel camera. Well, things have really changed in the last decade and the standard for a cheap camera is now 20 megapixels.

And seeds.

There are 80 megapixel cameras available for the aficionado, but mostly I see images here on ICMag from cameras with around 20 - 30+ megapixels. But this isn't a story about camera gear, it is about what the cameras can show us!

The Cannagraphic has always been about sharing pictures of your grows, and the irresistable lure of bud porn. What grower can resist looking at temptingly delicious buds with well-lit, glowing trichomes?

Every month there is a contest and there are many hundreds of amazing entries from site members, dating back over ten years. You can visit the contests and see all the images in the Photo of the Month Archives which date back to 2004:
https://www.icmag.com/ic/showthread.php?t=99376

My hat is off to MAIG (MyAssIsGrass), who has kept this contest alive since the very beginning here at the Cannagraphic. MAIG is the super moderator who compiles the contest entries every month, and posts the polls for voting, determines the winners and keeps it all rolling, tirelessly for 11 years now!!! Thank you MAIG for all your help with this.

The images are not all contest winners, but images I have admired over time from the archives of ICMag.

The Cannabis Encyclopedia

by Jorge Cervantes

After decades of research and traveling the planet, Jorge Cervantes has created this 'opus' of knowledge about the cannabis plant. While the word opus usually refers to musical compositions, an opus IS an artistic composition. This volume is that, and more. Jorge has offered us his experience and research about the growing and use of cannabis in a scholarly and authoritative way for us to use as a reference.

Jorge explains by way of the introduction that the all-new Cannabis Encyclopedia is "an excellent sequel … completely updated and expanded."

The Cannabis Encyclopedia is the sequel to, and a complete revision, reworking and re-imaging of the series of books known as the Indoor Bibles (Indoor Marijuana Horticulture – three editions; Indoor Marijuana Horticulture: The Indoor Bible; and Marijuana Horticulture: The Indoor/Outdoor Medical Grower's Bible). The first was published as a pamphlet in 1983, and had just 96 pages. Now the book is FIVE HUNDRED and 96 pages in length.

This task took many years, and through these editions Jorge has continued to refine his message and clarify all the knowledge he has gathered; and now distilled, into one printed book.

Señor Cervantes has been a cannabis aficionado since his youth, and as many people of that generation do, find it is important to tell the truth and expand people's knowledge about this healing herb. Jorge's explorations took him to all the continents except Antarctica, and his reporting skills helped him assemble a team of experts to work all this into a comprehensive understanding of the subject.

The work itself is very polished, well-edited and cleanly presented in the fashion of an advanced textbook for those studying to become professionals in their field. The field in question here is a field of green indeed. The work is sectioned four ways:

- Part One – Medical Cannabis
  In this section Jorge explores the history of cannabis, the science behind the medical aspects, and the varieties of medical cannabis.

- Part Two – Essential Medical Cannabis Horticulture
  This section is where Jorge covers the basics for growers, from the life cycle of the plant through harvest. He also covers methods of drying and curing cannabis. Various garden rooms and greenhouses are discussed and some basics about growing medical cannabis outdoors. The section finishes with four case studies.

- Part Three – Advanced Medical Cannabis Horticulture
  This is where it gets technical. From security issues to discussions of metering air, soil and liquids the Encyclopedia goes on to tell you about Air, Light, Soil, Containers, Water, Nutrients and Additives, Container Culture and Hydroponics, Pests, Diseases and Breeding.

- Part Four – Post Harvest
  Neatly wrapping up this volume is a section with information for the medical cannabis user on Concentrates and Tinctures, and Cooking with Cannabis.

One of the best features is the detailed index. Reference books require this vital tool enabling the reader to instantly put their finger on the answer to their question.

This encyclopedia would be great in an eBook format for that reason alone. The 2,000 plus images would be further enhanced by the ability to zoom into the wonders within these row upon row of images.

This book is HUGE. It weighs a staggering four pounds. The pages are over-sized from most books at a full 8½ inches wide and 11 inches tall. It retails in stores for $50.00, but discounts can be found at Amazon.com. There is a hard-cover edition available at this time also, it retails for $70.00.

The work is timeless in many aspects. The growing of plants for any reason can develop into a life-long passion for many, and this is a resource one can return to over time to learn something new, or to refresh your memory. It fits nicely on the shelf by the Western Garden Book and will be referred to at least a gazillion times over the years to come.

The work of Jorge Cervantes is so popular now that within a day of getting my review copy it was 'borrowed' by an associate who took a long time to return it. Fortunately I have it in hand now, and having been through every page, can offer this review in hopes you get this book, if you need a reference on medical marijuana covering all the aspects needed to grow and use it.
